KWILTKEYS ALLOWS USERS TO EASILY ACCESS AND SHARE PHOTOS ON IOS WITHOUT EVER LEAVING THEIR MOBILE APPS OR SWITCHING BETWEEN VARIOUS PHOTO SOURCES

SAN FRANCISCO – September 21, 2015 – Kwilt, an award-winning mobile media solutions innovator, today announced the launch of KwiltKeys for iOS at TechCrunch Disrupt SF 2015. KwiltKeys is the fastest and easiest way to access and share any photo from any source to any app directly through a versatile mobile photo keyboard.

"Sharing photos has never been easier or faster," said Marc-Antoine Benglia, CEO and Co-Founder at Kwilt. "KwiltKeys organizes all of your photos, from any source, location and date in one convenient and comprehensive photo stream, right at your fingertips."

Unlike other keyboard technologies such as SwiftKey, TouchPal, Swype, Fleksy and QuickType, KwiltKeys gives users direct photo access, right from a custom keyboard.

KEY FEATURES:

- Streams photos from over a dozen of the most popular photo and social-networking platforms without using additional data storage
- All-in-one direct keyboard access to photos
- Instant photo sorting with filters including date, time, location and recent photo streams – easily browse folders and albums from many sources
- View a larger preview of your photos before sharing them

KwiltKeys launched its private beta version in June 2015 and will make its public debut and announce exciting, new partnerships this week at TechCrunch Disrupt SF 2015, the world's leading authority in debuting revolutionary startups, introducing game-changing technologies, and discussing what's top of mind for the tech industry's key innovators.
